A handmade gift hunt is on the calendar in Burleson: the City of Burleson lists its Christmas Craft Fair for Saturday, Dec. 12, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The free event is scheduled at the Senior Activity Center, 216 SW Johnson Ave.

The city says local vendors will offer handmade items, with examples including sewn creations, art, jewelry, gifts and stocking stuffers. The listing does not name participating makers or provide a vendor lineup, so visitors should treat those categories as a general preview rather than a guarantee of what will be available on the day.

For shoppers, the practical detail to plan around is payment. The city advises bringing cash because not all vendors accept cards. Admission is free, according to the listing; it does not specify whether individual vendors will have particular prices or payment options.

The fair also has a defined handmade-only vendor policy. The city's vendor information says booth space costs $35 when the vendor provides a table, or $40 when a table is supplied. Applications are handled in person at the Senior Activity Center. Those details may be useful for local makers considering a booth, but the published information does not identify which spaces remain available.

Because the event is still ahead as of Nov. 2, check the city's Christmas Craft Fair page before making the trip for any updates to hours or arrangements. The city listing is the source for the date, venue, admission, item examples, payment advice and vendor terms; no individual participants are identified there.

For neighbors looking to direct holiday shopping toward handmade goods, the fair offers a single scheduled stop to browse work from local vendors. Bring cash as a backup, allow time to look through the different kinds of crafts, and confirm current details with the city before heading out.
